Register of enforcement notices and stop notices to be kept by local planning authorities (LPAs) from 27 November 1981

The new section 92A of the Town and Country Planning Act 1971 requires every district planning authority in England and Wales and every London Borough Council to maintain, in a prescribed manner, a register of enforcement and stop notices which relate to land in their area, for all notices issued or served on and after 27 November 1981.

Amendment to the General Development Orders (GDO) 1977 to 1981

2. To prescribe how the new register should be kept, the Secretary of State for the Environment has made the Town and Country Planning General Development (Amendment) (No 2) Order 1981 (SI 1981/1569), which comes into operation on 27 November. This Amendment Order inserts a new Article 21A in the GDO, prescribing the information which district planning authorities and London borough councils are to record in the new register. Most of the information is concerned with identification of the land to which enforcement and stop notices relate and the date on which various events in the life of an enforcement notice take place. The purpose of recording this information is to enable anyone with a prospective interest in the land to which an enforcement notice relates to ascertain, by examining the register, whether a notice exists and, if so, what its effect is. The only information whose recording may possibly cause difficulty for register authorities is the date on which the LPA are satisfied that steps required by the notice for a purpose mentioned in section 87(10)(b) of the 1971 Act have been taken. This information is to enable an enquirer to ascertain whether a "deemed planning permission" exists, under section 87(16) of the 1971 Act, for the erection of a building or the carrying out of works which are required by a LPA to remove or alleviate any injury to amenity which has been caused by the unlawful development specified in an enforcement notice. It is assumed that, in these circumstances, an authority would always want to satisfy themselves that there has been compliance with the requirements of such a notice.

Removal of entries from the register

3. Paragraph (2) of the new Article 21A specifies that the circumstances in which an entry is to be removed from the new register are when:-

- (1) an enforcement notice is quashed by the Secretary of State, in consequence of an appeal to him under section 88 of the 1971 Act; or
- (2) the authority decide to withdraw the notice, under section 87(14) of the 1971 Act.

An entry in the register is not to be removed simply because the LPA are satisfied that persons served with a copy of the notice have complied with its requirements: in these circumstances, an enforcement notice still continues to be a charge on the land (unless compliance with the notice has resulted in a "deemed planning permission" under section 87(16) of the 1971 Act) and it is therefore important that an intending purchaser should be able to obtain information about its effect.

Transmission of information by County Councils and Greater London Council

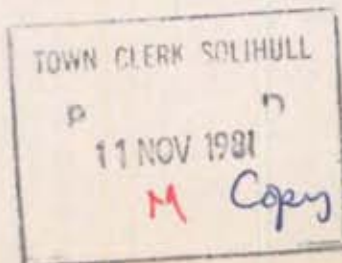

Paragraphs (4) and (5) of the new Article 21A require County Councils and the Greater London Council to transmit, to district planning authorities and London Borough Councils respectively, relevant information about notices issued by the County Council or Greater London Council so that it can be recorded in the register.

Form of the register

5. In making the Amendment Order, the Secretary of State has sought to leave register authorities with maximum possible discretion to decide how they prefer to keep the new register. It might be kept in the same way as the planning register, under Article 21 of the GDO, or in some different way - provided only that the required information is recorded in the register within 14 days of its occurrence and the register itself is kept conveniently for public inspection during normal working hours.

6. Some LPAs already enter information about enforcement notices in the local land charges register. The Secretary of State is advised that there is no legal requirement for this and, in future, the only requirement is to maintain the new register under section 92A of the 1971 Act. However, those authorities who wish to maintain, in future, their present local land charges register practice may like to enter in that register a cross-reference to the fact that a complete entry for an enforcement notice is to be found in the new register.
